AFRICA'S WATER DEVELOPMENT NEEDS

It was a privilege to attend a recent workshop in Johannesburg, South Africa on Sustainable Water Resources which had been organized by the African Development Bank (ADB) and the African Development Bank (AfDB). The AfDB was able to draw on one of the important general international development projects in the water in the East African Department of Water Affairs and Forestry and of the background of international cooperation in the field of water resources in the region. The AfDB is the only international financial institution in the world that is not a member of the World Bank. The AfDB is also the only international financial institution in the world that is not a member of the World Bank. The AfDB is also the only international financial institution in the world that is not a member of the World Bank.

Vice President Paul Biya

- In spite of the abundant availability of water, the water situation across the continent has become dire. The water crisis is not only a result of the lack of investment in water infrastructure, but also of the lack of investment in water infrastructure.
- Africa's water resources are abundant, but the continent's water infrastructure is in a state of disrepair. The lack of investment in water infrastructure is a major obstacle to economic growth and development.
- The AfDB is committed to supporting water infrastructure development across the continent. The AfDB is committed to supporting water infrastructure development across the continent.
- The AfDB is committed to supporting water infrastructure development across the continent. The AfDB is committed to supporting water infrastructure development across the continent.
